In the central U.S., it is not a question of if a damaging earthquake will happen, but a question of when. The Great Central U.S. ShakeOut is a simultaneous, multi-state earthquake drill, which is designed to teach people the appropriate action to take during an earthquake:

“Drop, Cover, and Hold On”.

On February 7, 2012 at 10:15 a.m., more than two million people are expected to practice this life saving activity. February 7 marks the 200th anniversary of the last of the great New Madrid earthquakes of 1811-12. These earthquakes created Reelfoot Lake in Tennessee and destroyed the town of New Madrid, Missouri. If they were to happen today, there would be widespread damage and disruption. Participating in the ShakeOut starts by signing up at -

The ShakeOut is being organized by the following organizations:

American Red Cross
Central U.S. Earthquake Consortium
Federal Emergency Management Agency
State Emergency Management Agency
U.S. Geological Survey and dozens of other partners
